

The Post-conflict New Europe

Needless to say the European project is based on the continuation of an anglosaxon tradition departing exclusively from the enlightenment. In this respect I find it hopeless for the European societies at large to allow the birth of much needed regenerative creatures such as, for instance, genuine works of art that could retain such power to go beyond the imposed dogmas.

Yes, the European union has begun with the wrong foot, too much seeking after ideals rather than concretely operating to enhance and marry the micro cultures within it. In a few decades I only felt that European societies got standardized almost in order to accept unanimously the global gentrified market together with a wave of non-European ethnicities. As a result the European folk as such has become fully invertebrate, too much aimed at building a societies of semi-intellectuals without actual skills.

Europe is making a lot of CO2 free smoke and not substantial meat is left. Europe can be wiped out in an instant and it will be wiped out and only then it will be able to regrow, perhaps hopefully united, finally getting rid of all the arbitrary borders now subdividing it, perhaps getting rid of the geopolitical situation within it seeing the north getting far more rich an arrogant then a drowning south.

In a few sentences I have expressed not so much a discontent but the calm view I have formed living ubiquitously the whole Europe for years, being myself an ancient European, both Roman and Germanic and yet now without a credo, neither then a political belonging nor a religious one. I maintain myself a Stoic as Stoicism is the philosophy growing as a reaction to an increasing Epicurean imperialism that cannot but end in a total catastrophe. Said that, I should be preparing the light for the new Europe.

How am I preparing for the new, post collapse Europe? Stoically I am doing so only partially through writing and reflecting but mostly through my own actions. I am growing three different kids, three bastards meaning three humans resulting from a mixture of European races and languages. As Moses' mother I am growing them and yet one day they will be given in the hands of what remains of the European empire, mainly in the model driving countries to the north.

Secondly I am preparing a new ground south, right at the epicenter of the populist uprising I am creating a black hole so black that folk will suddenly be able to see themselves reflected naked in it. They will be suddenly unmasked of the social media make-up they became so vane for. All this transmigration at the edge of legality is my contribution to Europe, to a new Europe, to a Europe who will have to give up looking exclusively at itself as an economic entity but will for once have to depart from a true solidarity, the kind of solidarity one finds in a nation only after a major conflict.

Needless to say this conflict is coming and my kids, so distributed across the continent will experience in first person and yet, thanks to all the transmigration they themselves will be subjected to, they will not fall for the simple traps of prejudices placing the fake members of fake nations one against the other. If religions and then nations were the opium of the people now is most definitively the various frameworks they partake to. These include both the older frameworks as well as new ones so the situation is far more complex yet any of these frameworks is to be considered a form of drug to avoid but the very framework we are able to devise ourselves as that is pure virtue.

I came to conclude that any framework (religious, political but also social media related etc.) is a form of fanaticism. Education itself is the very medium preparing a creature to be settled within a framework. I believe then that old, Stoic like form of education should be initiated to inspire pupils to develop autonomous frameworks and thus really to develop a full comprehension of life and human nature and thus to be in fact most apt to govern honestly without any blinding framework governing their choices, eventually in the wrong direction. Self virtue thus should come first if we wish an Aurelio, a Benjamin or a Gandhi as governors.
