

White Magicians Wanted

Media is magic, a magic with great power, steering humanity and its moods. Media without restraints is, or inevitably will be black magic. Restraints may be applied from sage leaders, they might be applied for some time, during the course of their wise governance.

Wise governance unfortunately is never long lasting. The ethics established by conscious leaders will, sooner or later, be overturned by the implicit potential of media.

Under any circumstances, media is like a Pandora's box increasing its capacity. No matter how long the conscious leaders will moderate its user, no matter for how long, sooner or later this Pandora's box is doomed to be opened.

How come we focus too much to debate about leadership when it is known that humanity is doomed to live up the consequences of a wide open Pandora's box? By all means we should retain the notion that media is magic.

With our notion in mind we shall consider without fail that, while popular gurus, irresponsible leaders will sooner or later perform the black magic implicit of media, white magic can be also enacted.

Let's stop at once to conserve our energies and stop our karma worrying about our leaders. The answer is near to us, the answer is more rustic and less sophisticated than we think and that is to turn ourselves into shamans and devise our own white magic out of the very media so much congesting humanity.

The accelerated self-destruction enacted by the black magicians can be decreased or opposed only by us picking up the role of white magicians.