

Stepping aside for a post conflict regeneration

I pose myself the question how to avoid the inevitable, the escalation of several international crisis leading to the next world conflict. In order to look for an answer I do not apply my rationality alone or fall into the deadlocks of academic notions, I will try to reason with my heart, in a state in which I have nothing to lose nor gain, in a position that makes myself most neutral and, most importantly, ready to die in peace.

Today it is again the rise of indignation at the very core of problems. It is not so much about power nor about the corruption of the latter. Media itself with its algorithms that are quite out of human control instigate our senses and polarize them. Politicians themselves are conducted by this form of indignation generated polarities. To begin with then what is needed is a great doctor able to heal the so susceptible human being.

At the core, once again it is the self contaminated by a stream of news which at first were streams flowing from everywhere but now have been strictly channeled and they cannot be easily crossed. Thus on one side of the channel is one polarity and on the other side the opposing polarity. The channel itself does not allow middle grounds and the conflict will happen. In this respect we can't really bring doctors to the two opposing crowds to heal their fanaticism as only blood and revenge seem the way the quarrel can be solved.

The channel ought to be understood from what it is, not the flow of life but an electric stream detached from life itself. It is from this detachment that we are not able to value a reality we have completely left behind. Reality in itself at this point can only be sought from within us more as a reminiscence of our lost human nature. It is connecting to this primary source that we might be able to recover our humanity and see the planet not circumscribe in the heat of the now but as the result of the time past, present and future in once.

What is all this constant absurd mess that humans, in all their scientific arrogance are still able to provoke? Removing and dislocating us into a more natural dimension is the key to provide the future hope. Not so much then all these philanthropy take too literal and boosting more discrepancies and future suffering. What is needed is an humble stepping aside from either of the opposing crowds, and whatever side destiny has placed us. Only at the very edges we can restart and one day meet the opposing edge for reunification.

We ought to escape the absurdity of conflict but conflict itself seems only inevitable with the unfair distribution of human resources and the dependence of modern humans on their global distribution. By stepping aside however, automatically these needs or most of them become drastically ephemeral. There is already a surplus and it is everywhere enough to sustain us in our marginalization on the look out for a post conflict regeneration.

The nationalization and the build up of the two opposing armies stampede anything poetic. It is our duty to rescue all the small living poetics. Humans caught up in the magnetic field of the electric stream cannot but fight with one another and bring with them like magnet themselves the most of the human population. It is already happening but already some people are stepping aside and in them our hope is placed.
